people with the values of self-reliance and dignity of labor. He appealed to the public, especially the younger generation, to adopt Khadi in their daily lifestyle, thereby supporting local artisans and contributing to the vision of Atmanirbhar Bharat.

The exhibition brings together an exclusive collection of fresh arrivals in Khadi designer wear and fabrics, including ladies' palazzos, kurtis, sarees, gents' shirts, Punjabi kurtas, Modi coats, Dhotis and premium Khadi materials. Along with these, a display of local handicrafts made of coconut shell of PMPGP assisted units has also been made. The showcase highlights the blend of traditional craftsmanship with modern design, making Khadi more appealing to urban and youth consumers.

Large numbers of visitors thronged the exhibition venue on the opening day, exploring the diverse range of garments and accessories. The event has been specially timed to coincide with the festive season, giving islanders the opportunity to purchase high-quality Khadi products while also availing special promotional discounts of flat 25% on Khadi wears.

The A&N Islands KVIB has consistently worked towards creating platforms for artisans and small entrepreneurs to market their products. By organizing such exhibitions, the Board seeks to boost Khadi sales, enhance the livelihoods of rural producers, and spread greater awareness about the importance of indigenous, sustainable industries.

The Khadi Sales-cum-Exhibition - 2025 will remain open to the public in the coming days, and is expected to witness enthusiastic participation from residents across the Islands. It is not just a sales event but also a celebration of India's timeless legacy of Khadi and village industries, a press release from A&N KVIB said.
